

TWINS INCREASE FINANCIAL CONTRIBUTION TO TARGET FIELD

The Twins additional investments helped pay for the Budweiser Roof Deck.

At the March meeting of the Minnesota Ballpark Authority (MBA), Dave St. Peter and Jerry Bell of the Minnesota Twins announced an additional $10 million investment from the team to improve Target Field and enhance the overall fan experience.

The Twins contribution to the project now stands at $195 million, $65 million more than what was outlined in the 2006 Ballpark Legislation.

Bell said that the contributions have been earmarked for a variety of uses but have been primarily focused on enhancements to the overall fan experience, ballpark design, architecture and sustainability.

Here's how the incremental project funds were spent:

$15 million – Infrastructure

$22.5 million – Architectural enhancements

- The Roof Canopy and Soffit
- Minnesota Kasota Stone inside and outside the ballpark
- LEED

The Twins spent an additional $4.5 million to enhance Target Plaza.
